Freeride World Tour

Season's take-off for Jérémie Heitz

Competition season is finally just around the corner for Jérémie Heitz. The Switch Freeride World Tour is set to kick off in just a few days. As the Chamonix stop was cancelled, there will be two legs between the 9th and 16th of February, 2017 in Vallnord-Arcalis, Andorra. The 25 best skiers in the world will duke it out to get the season started with one, if not two good results in the Pyrenees!

Even if snow conditions weren't desirable early in the season, Jérémie was still able to get out on the snow to train both at home in Switzerland and abroad in Austria. He took advantage of the subpar weather to work on his fitness, and nevertheless was able get out and to find useful things to do to get up to competition speed.

"Snow conditions are expected to be better in Andorra, but it might be very windy" stated Jérémie. Now's the time for Jérémie to hit the road to meet up with the FWT crew behind the wheel of his brand new ride!
