Freeride World Tour

Slight Knee Injury for Jérémie

Jérémie Heitz fell victim to a wild crash during the third stop of the Freeride World Tour in Fieberbrunn, Austria. After jumping a cliff, he went head first into the snow. The skier from Valais in Switzerland came out of the crash with MCL damage to one of his knees. Unfortunately, Jérémie's FWT season is over.

25 of the world's best skiers were on the Wildseeloder face at 8:00AM. Given the conditions and recent snowfall, the face had been secured several hours prior to the start. "I had another line more to the left in mind. However, I changed my mind the morning of the event due to how the secularisation of the face changed the face itself." Jérémie's crash was a sight to see - as soon as he landed he started to "tomahawk" a few times before coming to a stop. Thankfully, the crash's bite was a bigger than its bark as he came out of it with a solid MCL sprain. "We'll see how the injury progresses. I hope to be back on my skis in no time."
